

Organisational memberships

IPEd's organisational membership is open to organisations engaged in all aspects of editing for online and print publishing and those with an interest in editing, publishing or a related field, including publishers, tertiary education institutions and government.

An organisational membership is an investment in your business, institution or department and in your employees.

As an IPEd organisational member, your staff will be part of a strong community of Australian and New Zealand editors supported by a professional association dedicated to advancing the profession of editing, promoting the value of editing and supporting our members, whether freelance, in-house or organisational.

Explore the benefits of an IPEd organisational membership below. And review the three categories of organisational membership to determine which one is right for your organisation.

Being an IPEd member delivers belonging, credibility and representation.

Belonging

Membership with IPEd is an open door into a welcoming community of like-minded professionals and invaluable industry knowledge. Tap into a wellspring of support and cooperation and enjoy a range of practical and valuable resources, including member-only resources.

Credibility

IPEd maintains and promotes core professional standards for editing practice which sets out the core knowledge and skills that are the basis of editing practice. Knowledge and application of the Standards demonstrates professionalism and adds to your credibility.

Representation

IPEd ensures members' voices are heard by governments, regulators, and stakeholders through our industry partnerships and relationships, and via our advocacy. Membership contributes to a stronger voice for you.

We work to advance the profession of editing

IPEd is committed to fostering a thriving industry. We do so by delivering professional development, creating opportunities for the industry to progress and by providing editors a mechanism to demonstrate competence.

Professional development

IPEd offers a range of professional development opportunities including masterclasses, workshops and presentations.

IPEd biennial editing conference

Develop your knowledge, progress in your profession and gain new skills from attending IPEd's biennial conference.

IPEd accreditation scheme

The IPEd accreditation scheme offers Australian and New Zealand editors a mechanism to demonstrate competence.

We promote the industry

A robust, respected and collegiate industry is the goal of IPEd. This is why we invest in and promote IPEd standards for editing practice, why we celebrate our industry with awards and prizes and why we build relationships with international associations.

Awards and prizes

IPEd offers awards and prizes for members who make outstanding contributions to the profession.

IPEd standards for editing practice

The Standards sets out the core knowledge and skills that are the basis of editing practice.

Reciprocal memberships

IPEd has reciprocal membership agreements with overseas professional associations.

We support our members

Our members are at the centre of everything we do at IPEd. We work tirelessly to support Australian and New Zealand editors by sharing knowledge and resources and providing opportunities for community building.

Events and networking

Gain new skills, expand your knowledge and build valuable connections.
